The Speeches and Resolutions of the Mass Meeting Saturday

The announcement that the loyal citizens of Salt Lake would hold an indignation meeting at the Federal Court House last Saturday night seemed to send a spirit of life into all quarters, and at 8 o'clock the large court room was jammed with listeners. The purpose of the meeting was to get the true expression and sentiment of the citizens who denounced the outrage to the Nation's flag by the Mormons of Salt Lake on the Fourth of July:

The meeting was called to order about 8 o'clock by General Maxwell, who set forth the object of the large gathering. Parley L. Williams, Esq., was elected chairman, and Mr. Cook secretary. A committee was appointed to construct and present a list of resolutions. Prof. Ben-ner, Rev. Peebles, E. D. Egan, Col. Henry Page and Major James Nounan composed the committee, who retired and in due time presented the resolutions as instructed by the chair.

Addresses being in order, Mr. P. L. Williams' name was called, and that gentleman promptly responded in a short, terse speech which had the right ring to He stated that there had been

PEW SUCH INSTANCES OF DISRESPECT In the United States as that enacted here last Saturday, and at a time when the peace and prosperity of this nation of over fifty-five millions were being honored in commemoration of the country's Independence. Yet under these favorable circumstances, with a united country and harmony throughout the land, we Utah attempting insinuations by hanging the flag at half-mast and claiming that liberty is dead! It was something there was no reason for. He would not have expected any man or set of men of this land to have had a heart so deprayed as to have thought of doing such a thing. [Applause.] When the ensign of a man's country is insulted he feels it more keenly than when his home is insulted, for what is home without a country? The speaker continued his remarks, and said but one expression, and that of indignation, prevailed concerning the outrage, unless it was shown through the whitewashing process of a miserable and contemptible City Council or that expressed through the Descret News. There was one other paper in the city that is a proper apologist for everything that is bad, but it seemed to have no opinion on this question, and could be was difficult for him to meet the man on the street without insulting him who would insult the flag of the United States because of a "whim." The incident had caused the greatest indignation, but he considered the apologies offered far more insulting than the original offense. After speaking at length Mr. Williams took his seat amid cheers and applause, and other speakers were called for by the audience.

Mr. Livingston, standing near the door, said there were hundreds of people in the street, unable to gain admission or hear the speeches; he therefore moved that the people repair to the street, and the speakers and ladies to the balcony in front of the Wasatch, which was carried. The meeting was again called to order,

GENERAL MAXWELL Was called for. His speech was short and characterized by the usual feelings of a soldier's patriotism. He said he loved the flag, and never again, so long as a member of the G. A. R. was alive in Utah, would that flag be trailed in the streets of Salt Lake City. A sprinkling of hoodlums, with no respect for the flag, began yelling to the old veteran, who addressed them and that he and every speaker present had been forewarned that it would be made hot for them. "Take that flag (pointing to one of the three stretched across the street); that's a Butler flag and it floated over Baltimore. Some of you try to take it down if you dare."

C. S. VARIAN,

Being called for from all parts of the vast audience, responded in his eloquent and effective manner. He referred to the flag, significance and the nation's honor, which would be protected from any out-rage at all hazards. The half-masting of the flag on the City Hall, the Court House and public Mormon buildings was alluded to as not a "whim," but a mark of the with the Central Pacific, Utah capitalists traitor, and behind that whim lurked a motive that ought to bring shame to every American citizen. It seemed but very little remained to be done other than to signify the feelings of all loyal citizens by resolutions and protests, which would be responded to by the people of this great Republic from ocean to ocean. [Cheers.] Cries for General Agramonte came up from the throng below, and the gentle man came forward and began a spirited speech. Some of the salient points were as follows: Fellow citizens, and some of meeting that evening, was not notified nor in attendance. When his name is used sgain, Mr. Young would like the gentleman my blood was shot out of me in defense of that flag, and I am willing a great deal more shall be. [Cheers.] Last Saturday the American flag waved proudly at the masthead everywhere, and not a country on the face of God's footstool dared to dishonor it. [Apptause.] But here in Utah a man did it through a mere Who is this man Phillips 'whim.' whose whim led him to insult the flag? Is he a citizen? [Shouts of "No! Let me say that he who speaks to you now does not fear to express his opinions, although speaks a policeman came to my house and told me a few weeks ago that I was "spotted." The speaker then charged that Marshal Phillips was one of the men concerned in the filth outrage upon Mr. and Mrs. Stenhouse on Arsenal Hill several years ago, and finished by stating that if the Gentiles only knew it they had the power to hold their own against any treasonable

Col. M. M. Kaighn responded to his name as it was called out from the crowd. No speaker of the evening dwelt so fully on the status of affairs of the Mormon Church here in Utah as did Mr. Kaighn. He reviewed the tactics of the dominant party here in power; showed the lack of loyal patriotism among the church leaders, and in contrast to the situation here held up the perfect and peaceful union of to. the North and South.

During the evening a notorious young man of this city, who has figured distastefully in a great many such public meetings, persisted in trying to disturb the speakers by crying out various con-tradictions to what was said. He alluded to his father in custody, which he seemed to make out an incentive for his actions while it was known that his regards for that parent were as foreign as they were shown to be to the flag and those doing it honor. Here the committee on resolu-tions appeared and Prof. Benner read the entiments as follows: RESOLUTIONS Whereas, The flag of the United States about for a place to lay his he was placed at half-mast on the Court House and public buildings of Salt Lake City on and bed at the White House, Expressions of Loyalty to the Dear Old Fing," and a Protest Against Misrepresentation.

John T. Caine made rather damaging admissions in the Tabernacle vesterday when he tried to justify the lowering of flags to half-mast on the public buildings on the Fourth. His remarks in the beginning were flavored with apologies for the act, and his expressions of lovalty for the "dear old flag," which they were accused of publicly insulting, were profuse and flowery. He said that by expressing their sorrow for the injustice they were receiving at the hands of the officers of the government through having their people imprisoned without just cause, by having the flags at halfmast on the anniversary of our National Independence, the Mormons had placed the straw in the hands of their enemie that has developed into a cudgel through misrepresentation. He then said: don't intend to try to please our enemies; we don't want anybody to judge and construe our sentiments; we have no apologies to make, for our acts were not treasonable; we were here when our enemies came, and we will be here when they are dead and forgotten."

From the drift of his pseudo-sermon evident that most of the leaders counseled and were parties to the half-masting of the flags. He put considerable stress on the assertion that the Mormons had been accused of everything but being fools, and that they were hardly prepared to make fools of themselves by any overt acts, at this late date; yet from his manner of putting it, he evidently feared that they had. A few lame excuses and protestations of loyalty by the leaders will hardly set the Mormon people right before the world, and as to their protestations that l on every side of a proposition. It no insult was meant to the flag everyone can draw their own conclusions from the fact that no action was taken to punish those who did the work. The "white washing" process makes it only evident that the leading men of the Mormon church were the real offenders, and the city officers were puppets in their hands.

On the 29th of June Mr. Dan Simper, residing at South Cottonwood, and a cattleman by occupation, came to Salt Lake City for the purpose of disposing of his wool clip to Mr. Pickard. The latter gentleman expressed a desire to see a colt Mr. F. Brown as follows : owned by Mr. Simper, which was down on the race track, and the colt was chairman, Mr. Williams, and a rousing brought up for Mr. Pickard's inspection. "aye" went up. The meeting then ad-Neff, the trainer of the colt, to return to the track, and Mr. Simper then started for the Co-op. In crossing First South street he saw Mr. Neff coming back, walking by the side of the colt, with the wagon wheel locked. Mr. Simper rode up and asked what was the matter. Neff said the wheel was locked and he was going to Malquist's shop to have it fixed

Both men then proceeded to the blacksmith shop, and finding that the wagon could not be fixed that night, Mr. Simper proposed to take the colt down to the track with his mare. He led the colt up to the mare, when it became unmanageable, and had to be led away. Mr. Simper then delivered the colt to Mr. Neff, who led it behind a wagon to the track. As Mr. Simper was returning to his mare, he was arrested by Officer Salmon for indecently exposing his horse, and was bound over at the police court in the sum of $10, to appear the next day. He left $5.85, Officer Bateman becomin security for the remaining $4.15. Next day he appeared for trial and was told that the case was settled, although the case had never been called, and the docket showed no record to that effect.

The Salt Lake Herald of the 4th of in its Police Court report, contained the following item:

Dan Simper, whose education had evidently been partly attained by reading the Tribune, was fined $15 for indecent exposure. The case was heard on its merits on Saturday last, when Mr. Simper was acquitted, although Salmon and three others testified against him.

The Herald of yesterday apologized in the following strain: Dan Simper, who was charged with being drunk and indecently exposing a horse on the street, was acquitted. In justice to the gentleman we will say that our statement of a few days ago in reference to him was not true. Through some misunderstanding at the Court the case did not come up for trial until yesterday, although the records showed a charge against him of $5. The apology of the truthful Herald for printing such a grave and indecent charge against the character of such a gentleman as Mr. Simper is not entirely satisfactory to the accused, and to-day proceedings were commenced in a civil ibel suit against the Herald charging defamation of character, etc., the damages being placed at several thousand dollars. As there is no official charge on which the Herald could possible have based its article, it is hard to see how the "truthful" sheet can wriggle out of the very small hole in which the complainant

The noose tightened, he got one glimpse of a strange land and set an unceasing squealing and kicking until the window lights were smashed and Nightwatchman Heath was brought to scene and cut him down. THE OGDEN UNLAWFUL COHABS.

The Sait Lake "Herald" to Answer The Remarks of Judge Powers in Sentencing Those Cases.

In the cases of F. A. Brown and Moroni Brown, sentenced by Judge Powers on Saturday for unlawful cohabitation, the Ogden Herald's report reads as follows:

The Court then passed sentence upon

Mr. Brown, you have been indicted by a Grand Jury of this court on the charge of unlawful cohabitation in living with two or more women as your wives. You have been convicted by a jury of your countrymen upon your own testimony. The Court has carefully read the statement which you presented the other day, on the consistent of sented the other day, on the occasion of your trial, but I would like to know whether you have anything further to say why sen-tence should not now be passed upon you, if so I will be pleased to hear you.

Mr. Brown said he had nothing further

The Court: You and I occupy painful positions to-day. It is painful for a young man to be compelled to execute the law upon one so much older, and who has the standone so much older, and who has the stand-ing in the community that you have, and who has served in the position in which you have served. Nevertheless, you have stated to me that you simply did that which you conceived to be your duty and have done it sincerely. No matter how painful the task, and it is indeed painful, for I take no pleasure in sentencing any man and simply do it as a duty my country enjoins upon me, it is expected I will perform my duty as sincerely as you have told me you have done yours. It has been my object, and I trust it will be in the future, while I am upon the Bench, to give to every man a fair and impartial trial. Punishment has two objects. In the first place, it is a punishment to the defaulant and according in me exemple to defendant, and, secondly, is an example to others. I regret I am compelled to pass as severe a sentence as I feel it my duty to pass. I have endeavored to arrive at what would be a correct conclusion, and I trust my con-clusion is right, I would like to see the people in this Territory give obedience to the law, as well as in all others sections of the country. The sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned in the Penitentiary for six months and that you pay a fine of $300 and that you stand committed until such fine is paid.

The Court then address Mr. Moroni Brown. He had been indicted by a Grand Jury of his countrymen for the offence of unlawful cohabitation with two or more women as his wives. He had pleaded "Not guilty," in the first instance, but had afterwards withdrawn that plea and changed it to of one of "Guilty." His Honor then passed sentence as fol-

Mr. Brown, in your case as in the case of the defendant whom I have just sentenced, I wish I might feel it was my duty to suspend sentence in both cases; because while you have each violated the law, neither of you as yet see the error of your ways. Nevertheless, you have been sensible; you have indicated by your course that, however mistaken you may be, you have thought you were right. You have not evaded the law; you have not fled from the processes of the Court: you have not put the Court and the officers of the law to any undue trouble; you have not allowed you families to be drouged. have not allowed you families to be drag into the court-room, and you have not sat by and listened to their testimony, when they were endeavoring to shield you; but you came forward, both of you, and submitted to whatever punishment the law would put upon you. Nevertheless, I cannot do otherwise if you were my own father, I must pronounced sentence upon you in order that this people may feel that they must obey the laws. I am here to give all men a fair trial and if they are convicted to administer such punishment as will not only have its effect upon the defendant but upon the whole community. I wish that in passing sentence I could say something that would cause this whole people to wake up to the knowledge, they must wake up to sooner or later, that the laws of the country warst. the laws of the country must be obeyed. The sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned in the Penitentiary for six months

On inquiry it was learned from the young man him self that he hitched a buckskin colt belonging to Mr. Gunhand, his employer, to a two-wheeled cart yesterday, for the purpose of breaking the colt, which succeeded in breaking him, as was very evident from his appearance to-day. At first the colt started all right enough, but in pulling on him when opposite the City Stables the bridle broke and pulled back over the horse's head, which seemed to find it out before Goodman did and made a wild, frantic dash for liberty. Byron Crosby, in the cart at the time, thought the walking plenty good enough, and jumped out unhurt. Goomdan hung to the ines, which was as useless as though he had pulled on the tugs, until the horse collided the gig with a tree in front of Mr. E. J. Travis' residence, throwing the young man in the air like a rocket, to alight on his head and side on the ground. An examination showed his ninth rib of the right side broken, his back badly bruised, and an ugly abrasion or flesh wound on his forehead above the right eye. At first it was feared he had received internal injuries, but as yet nothing alarming has shown itself in that respect.

without making due inquiry.

This man came to Salt Lake City representing himself as the son of Dr. E. B. Foote of New York, the well known specialist, as abundantly proved by affidavits. As rumors came into Salt Lake City from Dakota and Montana from an expose made there, he changed his base and represented himself as the son of a more noted specialist in New York City than Dr. E. B. Foote, the well known author. Mr. John F. Trow, of the well known Trow's Directory, in New York City (forty years in the directory business). Ex-Governor Frank Fuller, of Utah, and the Hon. Abram Wakeman, for many years Postmaster in New York City, also Surveyor of the Port, gave their affidavits that there are no other doctors in New York by the name of Foote, excepting Dr. E. B. Foote, the author of "Medical Common Sense," etc., and his two sons, Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., and Dr. Hubbert T. Foote. The genuine Dr. Foote, Jr., will here after always employ the initials, E. B. in designating his name. Heretofore he has been known not only at home but wherever his publications have been circulated, by the name of Dr. Foote, Jr. Greater care will be taken here after, in view of the fact that an unprincipled person has assumed to profit by his and his father's reputation.
